WANT BORROWED GOODS RETURNED

Town Council Finds Citizens have been Enjoying Borough Property. Hear Requests and Complaints at their Monthly Meeting.

That private individuals have been appropriating borough property, borrowing it from City Hall and failing to return same, was the condition reported at the monthly meeting of the town council Tuesday night.

Five hundred feet of hose, original value $500, is not to be found in the engine house, ladders and other equipment have been removed, and frequent visits are made to the building to secure for temporary use various appliances. In some manner they are never returned and council now mourns their loss. The hose, it was stated, can be located, it being in the hands of responsible parties who took out sections not fit for use with the engine.

Council felt this should all be returned, however, and the highway committee's new horse and cart will be pressed into service to make collection. The steed, purchased by the borough at a cost of $113, refuses to "back" but, no matter, the collection will be made all the same.

While talking of borough property the council considered the alleged abuse of the privilege granted the band to use the building for practice. In the future they are to be restricted to the council room even though, as Burgess Raymond declared, they would have to "sit so close that no one would know what instrument they were playing."

Mike Tate appeared before council to state that he would like to have "some of the cream" once in a while and not always have to take skimmed milk. In explanation of this statement he said that he was only given concrete curb work for the borough on the back streets, where little pavement was laid, while other contractors got the main streets and had the opportunity to lay pavements for property owners at the same time. Councilman Gilbert declared it was a matter for the highway committee to decide, placing the work to the best advantage of the borough.

Council made no change in the total tax rate for this year, making it seven mills general tax and two and a half mills special. Last year it was six and three and a half. This will give the borough $10,500 or approximately $1500 more to spend for current expenses this year than last.

The bill of $46 for show licenses charged against John H. Raymond was reduced to $12, all of the shows except six being listed either as pictures or vaudeville which his annual license at the theatre covered.

A communication was received from Dr. Henry Stewart stating that the break of the old sewer entering Stevens Run had never been repaired. The question was referred to the sewer committee. The sewer committee recommended extension of sewer for 125 feet in the rear of Lincoln avenue to accommodate new residence of Dr. Bickle. The work was authorized. The committee also recommended the building of sewer in the southeast section of town to accommodate properties of the O'Neal estate at the corner of High and Stratton streets. The work was authorized provided written permission were given to cross government land.

William Haner asked for a concrete crossing on the south side of Hanover street at Fourth street. He was informed that the highway committee would do the work as soon as possible. He also asked for a share of the concrete work in that part of town.

The Board of Health asked and was granted $25 for extra expenses in the Sheeler small pox quarantine matter. Burgess Raymond presented an ordinance governing motor driven vehicles and regulating traffic. It was referred to the ordinance committee.

Upon report of Mr. Baughman, pavement notices were ordered sent George W. Reichle for his property on West Middle street and Martin Winter for his property on the second square of Chambersburg street. The highway committee was given authority to order pavements needed on the third block of Chambersburg street, after construction of new curb.

The borough solicitor was instructed to take legal steps to collect from guarantors money yet due on the subscription for construction of the first block of York street last year. The street is now to be given its second coat of tarmac, in order to protect the roadway.

WILL REVIVE HORSE RACING

Sportsmen of Hunterstown and Vicinity will Place their Track in First Class Condition and Arrange for Meets during the Summer.

Horse racing, which has been abandoned in Adams county since the dissolution of the Gettysburg Driving Club several years ago, will receive an impetus by the formation of the Great Conewago Trotting Association at Hunterstown.

This association was gotten together some time ago and took definite shape Tuesday when it leased the old Conewago track near that town from its present owner, Henry Zepp. The track is known as one of the best in this section by reason of its good natural location, in Decker's bottom, a small flat valley well adapted for a race course. The men who compose the association are Harry Deatrick, Robert S. Bell, Galt Weaver, Addison Leer, George Raffensperger, Harry Hulick, Chester Bell, Earl Guise, and John W. Tate. All are enthusiastic horsemen.

Work on the course will be started at once with the intention of having it ready to hold a matinee on the 4th of July. Although it has been abandoned since 1907 not a great deal of preparation will be necessary to put it in first class shape. Formerly, one of the objections to it was the inconvenience in approaching it. This has been taken care of by the new association having secured a right of way through which they will construct a serviceable road.

The track was originally constructed about 1904 by a number of New Chester men, who at that time, owned horses with speed. These horses became old or were sold and left the community and their owners did not continue their interest in the development of driving animals. Since 1907, no one in that section took an active interest in reorganizing the sport. The present body of horse owners intend to make the meet on July 4th the first of a series to be held at regular intervals during the Summer, and are anxious to get owners of horses in other sections of the county sufficiently interested to take part in the events.

Harry Deatrick, of Hunterstown, will gladly furnish any information concerning the details of the event to drivers who may be persuaded to participate in the matinees.

THINK THEY KNOW GIRL'S MURDERER

Carlisle Police Believe they have Placed Blame for Death of York Springs Girl on Proper Person. Unusual Letter Received.

Ten days have passed since the dead body of Hazel B. Myers, of York Springs, was found in an abandoned house near Carlisle and the authorities are but little nearer now solving the mystery than on the day of the ghastly find. Suspicion points to a young man who bears an unsavory reputation and who is no stranger to the Carlisle police.

He was arrested Monday night for a breach of the peace and insulting women, and was locked up. At the police station he said Monday night that "in the morning" he would tell some things, but Tuesday morning he did not even remember that he had said it. One of the police officers accused him of the crime, saying, "You know you murdered Hazel Myers," to which the accused replied, "Maybe I did and maybe I didn't," and when the police officer said, "Why, your conscience is troubling you, you cannot look me in the eye," he hung his head.

Chief Fought, of Carlisle, says the fellow can be traced up to 8:30 or 9:00 o'clock with Hazel Myers. They were seen going in the direction of Locust Grove and the abandoned house.

A well known Carlisle constable has suspected him of knowing considerable about the crime. He was heard to talk over the murder while in the lockup and some of the officers believe he could tell a great deal about it. He may be trying to throw the authorities off their guard and Chief of Police Fought has already discovered that the prisoner is untruthful.

Chief of Police Fought, of Carlisle, received a letter dated May 25, at Shippensburg, requesting him to question one—(name given) about the murder. The writer of the letter, who does not give his or her name, states that the woman in the letter and another young man (name given), were in a barn at Craighead's the Sunday night following the finding of Hazel Myers' body, and that he, (the writer), also was in the barn but the woman and man did not know it. He writes the conversation that he heard between them and which would seem to indicate that one or both knew something of the murder of Hazel Myers. Chief Fought has learned, since receiving the letter, that the barn had occupants on the night mentioned and there may be something in this clue, if it can be called one.

He was married to Miss Sybella Hildt, of Conewago township, who died twelve years ago. He leaves four children—Lewis Eline, of the Union Hotel, McSherrystown, William L. Eline, of New Windsor, Md.; Joseph H. Eline and Miss Margaret Eline, at home; also one sister, Mrs. Anna Lytle, of York; 12 grandchildren and 6 great-grandchildren.

PLAN FOR TOWN BASE BALL TEAM

Ira Plank Agrees to Manage Gettysburg Town Team. People Asked to Come Forward with Necessary Financial Support.

With Ira Plank as manager and the people of town lending generous support, Gettysburg will have the best base ball team this season that the town has boasted for a decade or more. Promoters of the idea say that they will be able to put in the field an aggregation which will do the town credit. Outside talent is to be secured to strengthen the team at positions where local boys are not able to deliver the goods.

It is estimated that, to maintain such a team, will cost the town $150 a month in addition to gate receipts. In order to secure this amount of money a canvass of all those interested will be made this week and next and the result of their efforts will determine the success or failure of the team. John E. McDonnell and Harry E. Bumbaugh have been appointed to solicit.

The plan, as outlined now, provides for monthly subscriptions of $1.00 or less, though to get the required amount will require a very liberal response on the part of all those who really care for base ball. No amateur team is to be placed in the field but a nine of semi-professional and college players is the goal of the enthusiasts.

It is the general idea to use Nixon Field, if it can be secured, and a schedule of games with first class teams will be arranged so that Gettysburg may have good sport during the summer months.

The Sunday School League is to continue as in the past, their games being played in the evenings.

ARENDTSTOWN

Arendtstown—Potato bugs have made their appearance in large numbers.

The vote taken in the Lutheran church at Arendtstown for or against building a new parsonage was 77 in favor and 7 for repairing the old one. At Flohrs church the vote was 102 for a new parsonage and 34 for repairs.

Memorial services were held here on Friday. The procession was formed at the town hall and moved to the cemeteries where the members of the G. A. R. and the fraternal orders held their usual exercises. Following this a very impressive service was held. Lincoln's Gettysburg address was read by Rev. T. C. Hesson, prayer by Rev. D. T. Koser, and the address of the day by Rev. J. B. Baker.

MARYLAND TOWN SWEEP BY FIRE

Creagerstown, below Emmitsburg, Suffers by Disastrous Blaze that Sweeps away Half the Buildings. Asks for Assistance.

Half of Creagerstown, a village of 200 inhabitants, below Emmitsburg is to-day in ashes, as a result of a fire which lasted for three and a half hours on Tuesday. In that time, twelve dwellings, several business places and ten small barns or stables had been burned, in addition to numerous other small buildings. The town has no water system. The money loss is given in amounts ranging from $50,000 to $70,000, partially covered by insurance, but the loss to the residents will be quite heavy.

The fire started in the Monacacy Valley Creamery engine room, and from there, fanned by a strong north-west wind, burned to the center of the town, taking all buildings on both sides of the street. The two hotels of the town were burned, and also the store of Robert L. Ogle, which carried an unusually large stock of goods.

The first appeal for aid was sent to Frederick, and Mayor Fraley was asked to send a fire apparatus to the town. The companies owning automobile apparatus hesitated about going, because during the fire last March at Mount Airy, the United Fire Company, in taking its heavy engine to the scene, tore the crank case to bits and damaged the engine to the extent of about $700. The Independent steamer, horse-drawn, was sent to Thurmont over the electric line, but when it reached there the fire had about died down, and it was not unloaded.

Just as the fire had burned everything up to the Lutheran Church, there was a sudden change in the wind and the flames were driven back over the burned section. This undoubtedly saved the church and the school house, which stand near each other.

When the fire was at its height residents of the town stated that unless help reached them within an hour and a half or two hours, they thought the whole town must go. The fire leaped the street of the town with ease and from the section of the town where it started to where it ended, the only building to escape was a small storehouse.

Only about 18 houses remain standing in the town and from these practically all the household furniture had been removed. From the burned houses nearly all the furniture was saved. The one half of the residents whose homes were spared are caring for their more unfortunate fellow-townsmen.

W. C. T. U. MEETING

Biglerville Organization Holds Monthly Session. Well Attended.

The Biglerville W. C. T. U. met at the home of Mrs. N. C. Thomas Tuesday evening. The good attendance shows no abatement of the temperance sentiment in Biglerville. The devotion led by Mrs. Frank Naylor followed a song service. Each member responded to roll call by giving a sentiment. The reading of the minutes was followed by business, most of which was the usual appointment of committees. In the reports from departments, the Flower Committee told of 135 bouquets and 123 text cards given out and of five visits made to the sick.

The literary part of the program was opened by a duet by Rae Weaver and Loretta Raffensperger. Mrs. G. W. Koser then gave a discussion on Soft Drinks. After a recitation by June Bigham, Miss Bertha Heiges told what alcohol is doing for Africa.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Wilson Wiernman July seventh. Mrs. Cyrus Griest, Mrs. C. Arthur Griest and Mrs. Dale Heiges were appointed on the program committee.

The Bendersville W. C. T. U. will meet at the home of Miss Beulah Harris, on Thursday evening, June 4th, at 8 o'clock. All members are urged to be present.

MEXICAN REBELS ARE DEFIANT

Carranza's Action Causes Consternation in Washington.

WON'T ACCEPT MEDIATION

His Statement is Interpreted in Washington as Nothing Short of an Ultimatum.

Washington, June 3.—General Carranza's defiant statement, sent from Durango, virtually rejecting mediation, spread consternation in official Washington, even in the ranks of the most hopeful advocates of peace.

He issued at Durango a semi-official statement declaring that the Constitutionalists would not accept any provisional government decided upon at Niagara Falls, but would insist upon Carranza becoming provisional president pending an election.

He asserted that no outside interference in the agrarian question would be tolerated, and asks "By whom are we to be crushed?" for refusing to give up the victory the Constitutionalists have won by arms.

That the Constitutionalists chieftain eventually would reject the efforts of the South American diplomats to pacify Mexico has been realized for some time, but that he would launch a denunciation couched in such bitter sarcasm at this time was wholly unlooked for, according to those close to the administration.

This statement bearing the sanction of General Carranza and his provisional government was interpreted as nothing short of an ultimatum to both the United States and to the South American envoys.

General Carranza, now that he finds himself at the head of a victorious army, with Mexico City as the goal of his endeavors within his grasp, apparently has decided it time to come out into the open and display his determination to resist all efforts on the part of this country to dominate the affairs of Mexico.

Secretary of State Bryan showed signs of anxiety when General Carranza's statement was read to him. He refused to make any comment in the absence of the official text of the note.

The cabinet members and White House officials showed deepest interest in Carranza's pronouncement as published in the news dispatches, and it was taken up for discussion at the cabinet meeting.

When the cabinet meeting ended none of the members would express any views on Carranza's latest pronouncement as it had not been before them officially. After the meeting another communication was telegraphed to the American delegates at Niagara Falls. It was generally understood that it continued to deal with the participation of the Constitutionalists in mediation.

It was predicted by some diplomats that within the next twenty-four hours the conference at Niagara Falls will have to be dissolved because of the attitude of Huerta's representatives toward the Carranza faction. The Huerta delegates, it is reported, have threatened to withdraw from the conference unless President Wilson and Secretary Bryan desist in their support of the Constitutionalists, and they are awaiting only instruction from Mexico City before taking this step.

These, it is thought, will not be long delayed, as Huerta is said to have intimated that the Washington government either must "mediate immediately or fight."

President Wilson and Secretary of State Bryan were in direct telephone communication with the American delegates at Niagara Falls, and Justice Lamar and his colleague, it is said, were instructed to keep the White House informed promptly of every development of the conferences.

In unofficial circles in Washington speculation was renewed as to the outcome of the mediation preliminaries if the A. B. C. envoys and Carranza failed to agree on a basis for Constitutional participation. Many observers took the position that even if mediation were confined to differences between the Huerta government and the United States, and the rebels continued their campaign to Mexico City, there still would be need of outside help to restore normal conditions.

While none of the administration officials know what the outcome of mediation will be, they do know the policy of the Washington government in the event of failure. This, it is understood, will be:

To continue in force present policy of occupying Vera Cruz, keeping the army and navy ready for emergencies, and to wait for the revolutionists to drive Huerta out of office and establish some kind of a government. If this is accomplished the Washington government will withhold recognition of it until an agreement is made and a guarantee given that the reforms demanded by President Wilson in Mexico will be put in operation at once.

Smallpox Hits Rebels.

Mazatlan, Mex., June 3.—Smallpox has broken out at Culiacan, the capital of Sinaloa, according to advices received by the commanding officer of the American fleet. The mortality in the Constitutionalists' garrison is said to be heavy.

FOX HUNTERS JOIN HUNT FOR LION

Escaped Animal is Seen Near Coatesville.

Coatesville, Pa., June 3.—The countryside for miles around is stirred by the appearance of a strange animal, said to be a lion or a tiger, which escaped from a circus train at Thorndale a few days ago.

Burgess W. L. W. Jones and R. John Allen, of Coatesville, who have traveled with circuses, declare that the tracks made by the animal resemble those of a lioness or a tiger.

The animal appeared in a cornfield on the James Greenwood farm in Valley township, a mile from Coatesville. Clarence Gill, a farm hand, saw it and ran to the farm house for a shotgun. When he returned it had disappeared.

When the news reached Coatesville a posse of fox hunters, with a pack of hounds, started out. The woods in the township were searched, but in vain. It is believed that it is hiding in the underbrush in a woods two miles northwest of Coatesville.

Farmers' wives and persons living on the outskirts of town are afraid to venture out of doors unless with an armed escort.

THREAD TRUST MUST QUIT

Federal Court Orders Dissolution of Combination.

Washington, June 3.—Dissolution of the so-called thread trust, organized under the name of the American Thread company, was ordered by Judge Reelstab, of the federal court, at Trenton, N. J.

Judge Reelstab ruled that the American Thread company and subsidiaries were affiliated in a combination in restraint of trade and in violation of the Sherman act.

All of the defendants are prohibited from dealing together or from holding, acquiring or investing in any of the capital stock or other securities of the other companies.

CHAIN SELVES TO GATE

"Suffs" Make Another Wild Demonstration Outside Buckingham Palace.
London, June 3.—Another militant suffragette demonstration was made outside the gates of Buckingham Palace, but neither King George nor Queen Mary was in the palace at the time.

One woman chained herself to the gates while the palace guard was not looking, and then she and a companion began waving flags and shouting "Votes for women."

Soon a large crowd had collected, but the police forced their way through, broke the chains and carried both women off to jail.

Safe Blowers Get $2500.

Champaign, Ill., June 3.—Five robbers blew open the safe in Busey's bank, at Mahomet, and took $2500 in cash. The robbers escaped in a motor car. Pursuit was made by deputy sheriffs, but the trail was lost near Monticello.

HOUSE RESTRICTS LABOR WRITS

Adopts Amendment to the Anti-Trust Bill.

CHARGE OF INTIMIDATION

Measure Forbids Courts to Prohibit Strikes, Peaceful Picketing or Assemblies or Primary Boycotts.

Washington, June 3.—Close restrictions on the use of injunctions in labor disputes are the feature of the section of the Clayton anti-trust bill adopted in the house.

The section forbids the issuance of injunctions except in cases where irreparable injury to property would accrue through delay. It is provided that there shall be notice of injunctions when issued and no unreasonable delay in hearing the issues between the parties.

It also provides that no such injunction shall prohibit strikes, peaceful picketing, peaceful persuasion of persons to work or quit work, primary boycotts, the payment of strike benefits or peaceful assemblage.

An amendment proposed by the judiciary committee and agreed upon by representatives of organized labor and administration leaders proposed:

"Nor shall any acts specified in this paragraph be construed or held to be unlawful."

With this amendment Representative Henry, of Texas, declared that the provision became "The bill of rights of American organized labor."

The house adopted without a record vote the Webb amendment declaring that none of the acts specified—peaceable strikes, boycotts and picketing—shall be construed to be illegal. All other amendments were rejected and the whole section covering the injunction question was adopted.

Representative Moore, Republican of Pennsylvania, pointing to Frank Morrison, secretary of the American Federation of Labor, and other labor officials in the gallery, arraigned Representative Murdock, Progressive leader, and others who had voted for the labor exemption, as having been intimidated by the Federation.

"I have not waited for a nod from the gallery to tell me how to vote," shouted Representative Moore, gesturing first toward Mr. Murdock and then toward the galleries, where the labor leaders have sat all through the labor exemption debate. "I have not voted to please our labor friends in the gallery. I would not have voted to exempt Samuel Gompers and Frank Morrison, nor would I have voted to exempt Rockefeller or Carnegie, nor to exempt any other special class; to make fish of one and fowl of the other."

The Republican leader, Mr. Mann declared that the Progressives did not know how to vote on the labor amendment until after consultation with Colonel Roosevelt.

"The colonel stands on the Progressive platform," retorted Mr. Murdock. "Unlike the Democrats and the Republicans, the Progressives are not hog-tied and they vote their individual views."

"They do not know what their sentiments are," returned Mr. Mann, "until the gentleman from Kansas goes over to New York and asks Colonel Roosevelt what the gentleman from Kansas thinks."

After the vote on the injunction amendment, the house took up provisions reforming judicial procedure as to contempt of court, and proposing trial by jury in certain cases of contempt. Efforts to amend the sections were voted down.

JOKERS MOVE JAIL

Three Pleasantville Guardians Worried by Vagrants of Prison.

Atlantic City, N. J., June 3.—Practical jokers are worrying the three policemen of Pleasantville.

There is a "two-by-four" jail there, that will hold all of seven persons—if they sit close together.

Sunday night the lockup moved, but no particular attention was paid to it. But Monday night it moved again, at least thirty-five feet from its assigned site. Then the investigation began.

Now the police are trailing the jokers who tried to steal the jail.

To add to the troubles of the force, Patrolman Krewson lost his keys, and when he made a "pinch" and tried to place the prisoner in the jail he found himself locked out.

Sulzer Removal Upheld.

Albany, N. Y., June 3.—In a unanimous decision the court of appeals upheld the action of the court of impeachment in removing William Sulzer from office. Counsel for Sulzer announced their intention to take the case to the United States supreme court. All the judges who concurred in the decision sat in the court of impeachment.

Japanese Landed No Arms.

Washington, June 3.—A report from the cruiser Albany says the Japanese steamer Seiyu Maru arrived at Salina Cruz, Mex., on Sunday and left for Peru, without landing arms or ammunition. It is understood by Admiral Heward that the Japanese line declined to carry them.

UNVEIL BATTLE MONUMENT

Lewes, Del., Raises Shaft to Commemorate Fight With British.

Wilmington, Del., June 3.—The citizens of Lewes and vicinity unveiled a monument to commemorate the bombardment of Lewes by a British fleet during the war of 1812.

The exercises, under the direction of the National Society, Daughters of the War of 1812, included music, an address by Mrs. James Bradshaw, of Lewes, on behalf of the Daughters; a presentation speech by former Congressman Hiram R. Burton, and addresses by Mayor James T. Thompson and Rev. Julius A. Herold.

The stone, of Brandywine granite, with a suitably engraved tablet, was unveiled by Miss Marion Mustard, of Lewes.

The bombardment of Lewes by fifteen vessels comprising the British blockading squadron, occurred April 6, 7 and 8, 1813, in consequence of the persistent refusal of the townspeople to supply the invading vessels with food.

The defense was made by Delaware troops under command of Gen. Samuel B. Davis, and inflicted more damage upon the vessels than the latter inflicted upon the town. It is a matter of local tradition that the only casualties on shore were the killing of a cow, a pig and a chicken.

Labor Troubles Stop Weddings.

Chicago, June 3.—Two hundred and nine fewer marriage licenses were issued here last May than in May, 1913, according to the license bureau's figures. Labor troubles are blamed for the falling off.

MOUNTAIN FIRE
Burned over Valuable Timberland Near Pen Mar.

A mountain fire started Tuesday afternoon at Pen Mar, midway between the Chambersburg, Greencastle and Waynesboro street railway terminal and a place called the Red Hen, owned by Benjamin Shockey, of Waynesboro. The flames spread rapidly and shot up the mountainside toward a number of buildings. The news of the fire was telephoned to Waynesboro, and the section gang of the trolley company went to Pen Mar on a special car, where they were joined by a force of fire fighters of the Western Maryland Railway Company stationed at the park and a number of other residents in the vicinity. The fire, before it was subdued, burned over several acres of timber land belonging to Lewis Kohler, Benjamin Shockey and the heirs of Dr. Herring.

SURVIVORS TELL GRAPHIC STORIES OF EMPRESS OF IRELAND WRECK; PITIFUL SCENES AT QUEBEC

A GRAPHIC description of the wreck of the Canadian Pacific steamship Empress of Ireland is given in the New York Times by the Rev. J. Walleit, pastor of the United Methodist church, Westcliff-on-Sea, England. This is his story:

At about 2:12 o'clock on Friday morning I was awakened by three melancholy blasts on the siren. The ship appeared to be still, but before the last note had died away I heard a horrible, grinding crash, and the ship seemed to shake from stem to stern. I jumped out of bed, ran along the starboard side and out on the upper promenade deck.

There was a slight haze on the river, and the Norwegian collier Storstad that had crashed into us amidstships was slowly backing away from us.

I rushed back to my berth and put on a pair of trousers and a coat, also a heavy overcoat, over my pajamas and welcome air blowing on my face. As one rose to the surface it was horrible to feel the countless arms and legs of people wildly struggling. It seemed almost impossible for any to win through, but it was, however, accomplished at last, and soon I was swimming in the direction of the nearest boat. On the way there several men clutched at me. One big man seized my life preserver, and I begged him not to struggle and we might both be saved. A few yards away was a piece of timber only about 5 feet long by 3 inches square, but when we reached it it helped us amazingly.

Dead Women Afloat.

We swam steadily toward the boat we saw, hearing on every side the fearful cries for help. I did not see a single woman alive in the water, though a little later I saw many floating about dead. Just as we reached the boat it rough calculation would serve to show that from the moment we had been asleep in our beds until we were plunged into the water a period of only twelve or fourteen minutes had elapsed. Surely this must be the quickest wreck known.

Presently, said the Rev. Mr. Walleit in conclusion, we were transferred from the Storstad to the Lady Evelyn a government boat which had come to the rescue, and so began our journey to Rimouski.

Heartrending scenes on land followed those at sea, when relatives stormed a low ceiling pier shed at Quebec to identify the Empress of Ireland's dead.

At the heads of forty rows of coffins stood lines of men and women. Each coffin lid was lifted by one of the searchers while others crowded close to get a glimpse at the body inside.

Suddenly a low moan of a man or the features of Mrs. Archer and those of the child, decided the baby was not the Archer child, and he finally awarded the baby to Cullen.

A woman attired in clothes of crude texture wandered past the bodies of the children, stopping to lift up the coffin lids and gaze tenderly on the little faces. Her baby had been torn from her arms.

One child with dark hair and features of a cherub, bearing many bruises, attracted her attention. She believed the baby was hers, but she was not sure. "My child," she said, "has one tooth on the right side. Bending over, she reverently opened the mouth of the tot, and then a moan escaped her.

"It's mine," she whispered and untied a black baby ribbon that ran around the neck.

Stairways Upside Down.

Alex C. Radley, chief boatswain's mate, who was on the bridge of the Empress of Ireland with Captain Kendall before and at the time of the collision, tells a comprehensive story of the tragedy. He insists that the Empress gave clear and distinct signals.

Radley gave the explanation for the few women saved, saying:

"The stairways were all upside down. Leading from the berth decks all of the stairways of the Empress were of the fan variety. They started up from the center of the ship with a few rises and then spread out toward the port and starboard sides. When the ship heeled over, which was almost immediately after the crash, the starboard angles of stairways were below the angle of the water, while the port stairways were leading straight up into the air.

"No one could get up them, not even the strongest men," said the boatswain's mate. "They were all caught as in a prison."

"It was the worst thing I have ever known in all my experiences at sea."

"When we saw the Storstad was going to strike I ran forward and shouted a warning to the men of the watch, who were asleep, about forty or fifty of them. Then I ran back to the boat deck to break out the lifeboats."

"The list, which came almost as soon as the ship struck, prevented free movement of the lifeboats. The first one we broke away tumbled and killed a sailor. All the time Captain Kendall urged the men to get the boats out quickly."

"When I reached the last boat on the boat deck I ran down to the saloon deck to clear the boats there. There were seven or eight of the passengers, men, out on the deck to see what was the matter. They were in their pajamas. I told them to hurry in and get their women folks out."

Women Trapped Below.

"When I brought out the last boat on that deck the ship was so far over that the lifeboat swung back and fogh and nearly threw me overboard. It was No. 15, on the starboard deck. But we got it to the water. I cleared the stern fall, but the forward was caught. I passed two axes forward to some one in the bow to chop the lines, but he let them fall overboard. Then the ship was settling and pulled the lifeboat down under the water until the fall broke. We all went under the water. When we came up the boat was upside down. Paddy, the cook, was with me when the boat came up. We saw another lifeboat a little distance away and swam to it."

"There were no women near us on the decks when we broke the boat away, but when we came up in the water they were all around us. I did not see any on the decks because they were all trapped below by the stairways being upside down. When the ship heeled over the starboard side of the steps were all under the water or so far down that to go on them meant to run down further. The port sides were perpendicular, and no one could run up them or climb up them."

"The women and the men had no way to get to the decks. When I reached the other lifeboat I took charge, and we roved around, picking up all the people we could see. Most of the other women had been picked up by some of the other boats, but we got four into our boat and about thirty-four men. We took any one that was near. Most of them were the ship's men, naturally, because they were familiar with the boat."

"The Storstad had her lifeboats out just as quickly as we had ours out."

Premonitions of Disaster.

One of the saddest figures on the pier at Quebec was Major J. M. McGillivray of the Salvation Army, who told the story of the loss of 150 of 175 members of the Salvation Army.

He told, too, the story of a dream which foretold the fate of the party. "Mrs. Nettie Simcoe," he said, "had a terrible dream the night before we sailed. She saw heads moving about in the water and great crowds of people all wearing crapes. She told me about it that morning, and later Edward Gray, a young newspaper artist, who was with us, told me he had made a will in favor of his sweetheart fearing disaster."

Kenneth McIntyre, one of the Salvation Army survivors of the Empress of Ireland, said:

"If I hadn't been able to swim there wasn't the remotest chance of my getting ashore alive. I swam for nearly half a mile to the vessel that struck us. Then we were taken on board the Lady Evelyn."

Miss Terla Townshend of Blenheim Marlborough, New Zealand, escaped death by swimming two miles after jumping from the Empress.

Robert W. Crellin, a miner from British Columbia, grabbed Florence Barbour, eight-year-old daughter of Sabina Barbour, after the collision and swam for ten minutes with the child on his back.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

SERVING SPINACH.

EAT spinach for health in the spring, say dietists. This useful green may be served in the following tempting ways:

Wholesome Simplicity.

Spinach and Egg.—Take one peck of spinach, one-half teaspoonful of pepper, two tablespoonfuls of butter, one-eighth teaspoonful of nutmeg, one hard-boiled egg, salt to taste. Remove roots from the spinach, wash the leaves in four changes of cold water, then scald with very hot water. This sifts any remaining grit to bottom of pan. Place in kettle or steamer top with teaspoonful of salt—don't add any water—and cook until tender, lifting occasionally to prevent burning. Drain, put in chopping tray, add seasonings and chop fine. Reheat, place in mound in serving dish and garnish with hard-cooked egg to represent a daisy.

Novel Salad.

Spinach Salad.—Pick over, wash and cook one-half peck of spinach. Drain and chop fine. Season with salt, pepper and lemon juice and add one tablespoonful of melted butter. Butter small tin molds slightly and pack solidly with the mixture. Chill, remove from mold and arrange on thin slices of cold-boiled tongue. Garnish at base with parsley and on top of each with tartare sauce.

Vegetable Croquettes.

Spinach Croquettes.—Chop very fine a pint of cooked spinach. Put over the fire a large tablespoonful of butter and half a small onion cut in quarters. When the onion colors remove from pan and put in the spinach, stirring and adding gradually a tablespoonful of flour, some of bread crumbs, half a cupful of grated cheese, yolks of two eggs, beaten and stirred quickly, one-fourth cupful of milk or sufficient to make right consistency, salt and nutmeg to taste. Turn out on floured board when stiff enough to mold, flour the hands and form into small croquettes. Cook in boiling lard from five to seven minutes. Shake or drain in a sieve. Arrange on serving dish, sprinkle with grated cheese, moisten with melted butter and place in oven to heat through.

McCoy Lauds French Fighters.

That the average French fighter is better than the average fighter is the opinion of Kid McCoy, the famous middleweight, who has just arrived from Europe. He declares that Frenchmen are making wonderful strides in the pugilistic line and that it won't be long before they are holding their own in advance of the world's best pugilists.

"The French lads are making rapid progress in fisticuffs because they are learning the game from the bottom up. In any gymnasium or roadhouse you'll see them all practicing with both hands. Most of our boxers can only hit with one hand."

THE USELESS ROOSTER.

South Dakota has joined the anti-rooster campaign, and Saturday, June 6, was appointed by the state pure food department as a day for killing all roosters not needed for breeding purposes and converting them into potpie for the Sunday dinner. The move is a good one and should become general. Hens lay just as well and their eggs keep a whole lot better if the roosters are kept away from them. It is contended that there is not a single factor that is responsible for more rotten and added eggs than their being fertile during warm weather. A few hours under a hen does the business, and the eggs are not fit to market and soon become unfit for anything but fertilizer.

SOME SUGGESTIVE FIGURES.

Here are some interesting facts that ought to furnish a suggestion or two for corn growers. In no ten year period in the history of corn growing in the United States has the average yield per acre exceeded twenty-eight bushels, while no state has averaged for any year over fifty-four bushels per acre. In contrast to these figures is the significant fact that in most every section of the country that pretends to raise corn yields of more than a hundred bushels per acre have been secured. With such low average yields, it is humiliating to contemplate what the production per acre must be of those growers who bring the average for the country down to so low a level.

BATTLESHIPS AND BUGS.

From the standpoint of the agriculturist it would seem good judgment to put the next $200,000,000 which will be called for the building of two new battleships in a campaign which will have for its purpose the waging of a war on the insect pests of the country. The work might be started in New England, where the gypsy moth is continuing its destructive work, and wind up with the chinch bug in Kansas and Nebraska. Incidentally the money spent in this fashion would be devoted to just as patriotic a purpose as if it were put into battleships, powder and sixteen inch shells.

Almost Too Much.

A wealthy Jew on his vacation was fond of horseback riding. He had been hiring a fine horse, and decided to buy it, if he could make arrangements to have it kept on the hotel grounds. He spoke to the manager, who smiled and named a ridiculously high rate. "Excuse me," said the son of Abraham, with a twinkle in his eyes, "but I don't mind if you sting me for my board—I'm a Jew—but the horse ain't a Jew, too, is it?"—San Francisco Argonaut.

Theirs to Mold Lives.

Mothers and maidens, believe me, the whole course and character of your lovers' lives is in your hands; what you would have them to be they shall be, if you not only desire to have them so, but deserve to have them so; for they are but mirrors in which you will see yourselves imaged. If you are frivolous, they will be so also; if you have no understanding of the scope of their duty, they also will forget it; they will listen—they can listen—to no other interpretation of it than that uttered from your lips.—Ruskin.

Sailor-Authors.

Perhaps the most celebrated authors who started life as sailors are Fenimore Cooper, the famous author of "The Last of the Mohicans;" Clark Russell, the author of "Alone on the Wide, Wide Sea," and Frank T. Bullen, the author of "The Cruise of the Cachalot." This trio has made excellent use of the seafaring lore which only experience can give in the long list of works for which they are responsible.

For Your Plants.

Instead of buying expensive jardinières for your potted plants, simply paint the ordinary flower pots and saucers with a flat oil paint in a color to harmonize with the color scheme of the room they are in. Flower pots painted a green-blue or a Chinese blue are wonderfully quaint and decorative.

soon was prepared to go on deck. At most by accident that afternoon I had noticed the life preserver on the top of the wardrobe. I hastily secured it and rushed out on deck.

Many people were by this time on deck, but very, very many never managed even to get so far as that. The list to starboard had increased alarmingly, indeed the port side had assumed the position usually occupied by the deck.

By this time several hundreds of people were sitting on the side of the ship, which had assumed an almost horizontal position. So markedly was this the case that one man was seen stooping down to fasten up his boot-laces as though he were doing it on deck. Near where I sat on the side of the ship a man who appeared to be a fireman sat with his head between his knees calling loudly on God for help, his nerves seeming to be quite shattered.

Engulfed by a Great Wave.

Suddenly, without any warning, the vessel plunged into the depths taking with her all of us who were seated on the side. To me it appeared not so much as though the ship had gone down as that the sea had risen up, a great wave coming hissing along and sweeping her away. Naturally, we went down with her, and at that moment one remembered all the stories that one had heard of people who in similar plights had been sucked down never to rise alive again.

After a little space I was conscious that I was coming to the surface. Of course I had been treading water vigorously all the time and soon felt the

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—John Vallant, a rich society favorite, suddenly discovers that the Vallant corporation, which his father founded and which was the principal source of his wealth, has failed.

CHAPTER II—He voluntarily turns over his private fortune to the receiver for the corporation.

CHAPTER III—His entire remaining possessions consist of an old motor car, a white bull dog and Damory court, a neglected estate in Virginia.

CHAPTER IV—He learns that this estate came into the family by royal grant and has been in the possession of the Vallants ever since.

CHAPTER V—On the way to Damory court he meets Shirley Dandridge, an au-burn-haired beauty, and decides that he is going to like Virginia immensely.

CHAPTER VI—An old negro tells Shirley's fortune and predicts great trouble for her on account of a man.

CHAPTER VII—Uncle Jefferson, an old negro, takes Vallant to Damory court.

CHAPTER VIII—Shirley's mother, Mrs. Dandridge, and Major Bristow exchange reminiscences during which it is revealed that the major, Vallant's father, and a man named Sassoon, were rivals for the hand of Mrs. Dandridge in her youth. Sassoon and Vallant fought a duel on her account in which the former was killed.

CHAPTER IX—Vallant finds Damory court overgrown with weeds and creepers and the buildings in a very much neglected condition. Uncle Jefferson and his wife, Aunt Daphne, are engaged as servants.

CHAPTER X—Vallant explores his ancestral home. He is surprised by a fox hunting party which invades his estate. He recognizes Shirley at the head of the party.

CHAPTER XI—He gives sanctuary to the cornered fox. Gossips discuss the advent of the new owner and recall the tragedy in which the elder Vallant took part.

CHAPTER XII—Vallant decides to rehabilitate Damory court and make the land produce a living for him.

CHAPTER XIII—He meets Shirley, who has been gathering dew on the Vallant estate, and reveals his identity to her.

CHAPTER XIV—Vallant saves Shirley from the bite of a snake, which bites him. Knowing the deadliness of the bite, Shirley sucks the poison from the wound and saves his life.

CHAPTER XV—Shirley tells her mother of the incident and the latter is strangely moved at hearing that a Vallant is again in the country. She writes to her father, who is in the history of his family from Doctor Southall and Major Bristow.

CHAPTER XVI—He learns for the first time that his father left Virginia on account of a duel in which Doctor Southall and Major Bristow acted as his father's seconds.

CHAPTER XVII—Vallant and Shirley become good friends. Mrs. Dandridge faints when she first meets Vallant.

CHAPTER XVIII—Vallant works wonders in the old place. He discovers that he has a fortune in old walnut trees.

CHAPTER XIX—With the advice and assistance of the major and Shirley, Vallant restores the plantation to what they were in his father's time.

CHAPTER XX—The Vallant family is a survival of the fittest of feudal times, is to be held at Damory court.

CHAPTER XXI—At the last moment Vallant takes the place of one of the knights, who is sick, and enters the place.

CHAPTER XXII—He wins and chooses Shirley Dandridge as queen of beauty to the dismay of Katharine Fargo, a former sweetheart, who is visiting in Virginia.

CHAPTER XXIII—The tournament ball at Damory court draws the elite of the countryside. Shirley is crowned by Vallant as queen of beauty.

CHAPTER XXIV—Vallant tells Shirley of his love and they become engaged.

CHAPTER XXV—Katharine Fargo is deeply humiliated at reading in the faces of Vallant and Shirley the evidence of plighted troth.

CHAPTER XXVI—Katharine Fargo, determining not to give up Vallant without a struggle, points out to Shirley how terrible it would be for the woman who caused the duel to meet Vallant, who looks so much like his father.

CHAPTER XXVII—Shirley, uncertain, but feeling that her mother was in love with the victim of Vallant's pistol, breaks the engagement.

CHAPTER XXVIII—Grief King, a liberated convict whom Major Bristow had sent to prison, makes threats against his prosecutor.

CHAPTER XXIX—Vallant pleads with Shirley, but fails to persuade her to change her decision.

CHAPTER XXX—Major Bristow is fatally wounded by Grief King, but before dying he confesses to Mrs. Dandridge that he had kept a letter Vallant had written to her after the duel.

CHAPTER XXXI—The grim posse that gathered in haste that afternoon did not ride far. Its work had been singularly well done. It brought back to Damory court, however, a white bulldog whose broken leg made his movements joyful bark trail into a sad whimper as his owner took him into welcoming arms.

Next day the major was carried to his final rest in the myrtled shadow of St. Andrew's. At the service the old church was crowded to its doors. Vallant occupied a humble place at one side—the others, he knew, were older friends than he. The light of the late afternoon came dimly in through the stained-glass windows and seemed to clothe with subtle colors the voice of the rector as he read the solemn service. The responses came brokenly, and their tears on many faces.

Vallant could see the side-face of the doctor, its saturnine grinnings strangely moved, and beyond him, Shirley and her mother. Many glanced at them, for the major's will had been opened that morning and few there had been surprised to learn that, save for a life-annuity for old Jereboam, he had left everything he possessed to Shirley. Miss Mattie Sue was beside them, and between, with weeping, sat Ricky Snyder. Shirley's arm lay sheltering about the small shoulders as if it would stay the passion of grief that from time to time shook them.

The evening before had been further darkened by the child's disappearance and Miss Mattie Sue had sat through half the night in tearful anxiety. It was Vallant who had solved the riddle. In her first wild compunction, Ricky had gasped out the story of her meeting with Grief King, his threat and her own terrorized silence, and when he heard of this he had guessed her whereabouts. He had found her at the Dome, in the deserted cabin from which on a snowy night six years ago, Shirley had rescued her. She had fled there in her shabbiest dress, her toys and trinkets left behind, taking with her only a string of blue glass beads that had been Shirley's last Christmas present.

He Went Upstairs, Into the Bedroom One by One.

"Let me stay!" she had wailed. "I'm not fit to live down there! It's all my fault that it happened. I was a coward. I ought to stay here in Hell's-Half-Acre forever and ever!" Vallant had carried her back in his arms down the mountain—she had been too spent to walk.

He thought of this now as he saw that arm about the child in that protective, almost motherly gesture. It made his own heartache more unbearable. Such a little time ago he had felt that arm about him!

He leaned his hot head against the cool plastered wall, trying to keep his mind on the solemn reading. But Shirley's voice and laugh seemed to be running eerily through the chanting lines, and her face shut out pulp and lectern. It swept over him suddenly that each unobtainable hour could but make the situation more impossible for them both. He had seen her as she entered the church, had thought, even paler, than in the wood, the bluish shadows deeper under her eyes.

Those delicate charms were in eclipse. And it was he who was to blame! It came to him with a stab of enlightenment. He had been thinking only of himself all the while. But for her, it was his presence that had now become the unbearable thing. A cold sweat broke on his forehead.

"To go away! To pass out of her life, to a future empty of her? How could he do that? When he had parted from her in the rain he had felt a frenzy of obstinacy. It had seemed so clear that the barrier must in the end yield before their love. He had never thought of surrender. Now he told himself that flight was all that was left him. She—her happiness—nothing else mattered. Damory court and its future—the plans he had made—the Vallant name—in that clarifying instant he knew that all these, from that May day on the Red road, had clung about her. She had been the inspiration of all.

"Lead, kindly Light, amid the encircling gloom—"

The voices of the unvested choir rose clearly and some one at his side was whispering that this had been the major's favorite hymn. But he scarcely heard.

When the service was ended the people filled the big yard while the last reverent words were spoken at the grave. Vallant, standing with the rest, saw Shirley, with her mother and the doctor, pass out of the gate. She was not looking toward him. A mist was before his eyes as they drove away, and the vision of her remained wavering and indistinct—a pale blurred face under shining hair.

He realized after a time that the yard was empty and the sexton was locking the church door. He went slowly to the gate, and just outside some one spoke to him. It was Chisholm Lusk. They had not met since the night of the ball. Even in his own preoccupation, Vallant noted that Lusk's face seemed to have lost its exuberant youthfulness. It was worn as if with sleeplessness, and had a look of suffering that touched him. And all at once, while they stood looking at each other, Vallant knew what the other had waited to say.

"I won't beat about the bush," said Lusk stammering. "I've got to ask you something. I reckon you've guessed that I—that Shirley—"

Vallant touched the young fellow's arm. "Yes," he said. "I think I know."

"It's no new thing, with me," said the other hoarsely. "It's been three years. The night of the ball, I thought perhaps that—I don't mean to ask what you might have a right to resent—but I must find out. Is there any reason why I shouldn't try my luck?"

Vallant shook his head. "No," he said heavily, "there is no reason."

The boyish look sprang back to Lusk's face. He drew a long breath. "Why, then I will," he said. "I'm sorry if I hurt you. Heaven knows I didn't want to!"

He grasped the other's hand with a man's heartiness and went up the road with a swinging stride; and Vallant stood watching him go, with his hands tight-clenched at his side.

A little later Vallant climbed the sloping driveway of Damory court. It seemed to stare at him from a thousand reproachful eyes. The bachelor red squirrel from his tree-crotch looked down at him askance. The peabirds, flashing through the hedges, fluttered disconsolately. Fire-Cracker, the peacock, was shrieking from the upper lawn and the strident discord seemed to mock his mood.

The great house had become home to him; he told himself that he would make no other. The few things he had brought—his books and trophies—had grown to be a part of it, and they should remain. The ax should not be laid to the walnut grove. As his father had done, he would leave behind him the life he had lived there, and the old court should be once more closed and deserted. Uncle Jefferson and Aunt Daphne might live on in the cabin back of the kitchens. There was pasture for the horse and the cows and for old Suke, and some acres had already been cleared for planting. And there would be the swans, the ducks and chickens, the peafowl and the fish.

A letter had come to him that morning. The corporation had resumed business with credit unimpaired. Public opinion was more than friendly now. A place waited for him there, and one of added honor, in a concern that had rigorously cleansed itself and already looked forward to a new career of prosperity. But he thought of this now with no thrill. The old life no longer called. There were still wide unpeopled spaces somewhere where a man's hand and brain were no less needed, and there was work there that would help him to bear, if not forget.

He paced up and down the porch under the great gray columns, his steps spiritless and lagging. The Virginia creeper, trailing over its end, waved to and fro with a sound like a sigh. How long would it be before the lawn was once more unkempt and dragged? Before burdock and thistle, mullein and Spanish-needle would return to smother the clover? Before Damory court, on which he had spent such loving labor, would lie again as it lay that afternoon when he had rattled thither on Uncle Jefferson's crazy hack? Before there would be for him, in some far-away corner of the world, only Wishing-House and the Never-Never Land?

In the hall he stood a moment before the fireplace, his eyes on its carved motto, "I cling." The phrase was like a spear-thrust. He began to wander restlessly through the house, up and down, like a prowling animal. The dining-room looked austere and chill—only the little lady in hoops and love-curios who had been his great-grandmother smiled wistfully down from her gilt frame above the console—and in the library a melancholy deeper than that of yesterday's tragedy seemed to hang, through which Devil-John, drawing closer the leash of his leaping hound, glared sardonically at him from his old eye.

The shutters of the parlor were closed, but he threw them open and let the rich light pierce the yellow gloom, glinting from the figures in the cabinet and weaving a thousand tiny rainbows in the prisms of the great chandelier.

He went upstairs, into the bedrooms one by one, now and then passing his hand over a polished chair-back or touching an ornament or a frame on the wall: into The Hilarium with its records of childish study and play. The dolls stood now on dress-parade in glass cases, and prints in bright colors, dear to little people, were on the walls. He opened the shutters here, too, and stood some time on the threshold before he turned and went heavily downstairs.

Through the rear door he could see the kitchens, and Aunt Daphne sitting under the trumpet-vine picking a nine-patch calico quilt with little squares of orange and red and green cloth. Two diminutive darkeys were sprawled on the ground looking up at her with round serious eyes, while a wary bantam pecked industriously about their bare legs.

"En den what de roostah say, Aunt Daph?"

"Oh! roostah he ollah to all he wifes, Oo—ooo! Oo—ooo! Young Mars' come!—Young Mars' come! Young Mars' come! En dey all mighty skered, 'case Mars' John he cert'n'y fond ob fried chick'n. But de big tuckey gobber he don' bleeve et 'tall."

"Doubtful—doubtful—doubtful!" he say, lak dat. Den de drake he peep eround de cornah, en he say, 'Haish! Haish! Haish!' Fo' he done seed Mars' John comin', sho' nuff. But et too late by den, fo' Aunt Daph she done grab M's' Pullet, en Mars' John he gwine ter eat hah dis berry evenin' fo' he suppah. Now you chillun runs erlong home ter yo' mummies, en don' yo' pick none ob dem green apples on de way, neidah."

It was not till after dark had come that Vallant said goodby to the garden. He loved it best under the starlight. He sat a long hour under the pergola overlooking the lake, where he could dimly see the green rocks, and the white froth of the water bubbling and chucking down over their rounded outlines to the shrouded level below. The moon lifted finally and sware through the sky, blowing out the little lamps of stars. Under its light a gossamer mist robbed the land-

Woman's World

Mrs. Pennybacker, Women's Club Leader and Philanthropist.

MRS. PERCY V. PENNYBACKER.

The gathering of women's clubs in Chicago which is set for June 9 to 16 will be a notable and interesting event. Only once in two years does the General Federation of Women's Clubs convene. Mrs. Percy V. Pennybacker, who was elected president two years ago, will preside. Mrs. Pennybacker has done much for the woman's club movement, and her election was not only due to her wide popularity, but a recognition of valued service. She had already served as treasurer of the organization and in the arduous capacities of chairman of the program and endowment committees and as auditor.

Mrs. Pennybacker is a southern woman by birth. She first saw the light at Petersburg, Va. Her father was the Rev. J. B. Hardwicke, D. D. She was educated at the high school in Leavenworth, Kan., and at the State Normal school in Huntsville, Tex. She taught school for fourteen years, an experience that was the foundation for her great interest in educational work.

She was married in 1884 to Percy V. Pennybacker, a leading educator of Texas. The marriage was a very happy one, but in 1899 he died. Administering her home affairs and looking after her children did not occupy her time to the exclusion of intellectual interests. She has always been an enthusiastic clubwoman. Through the woman's club she believes much educational work may be accomplished and wide social service rendered.

She is a gifted writer and speaker. Her history of Texas is a standard work on that subject. If a lady of such broad interests may be said to have a special field it is in increasing the efficiency of the public schools and bringing the advantages of state universities and technical schools within the reach of poor boys and girls.

Her home is at Austin, Tex., where she is the center of a distinguished social and intellectual circle.

Unkind Words.

Unkind words do as much harm as unkind deeds. Many a heart has been stabbed to death by a few little words. There is a charity which consists in withholding words, in keeping back harsh judgments, in abstaining from speech, if to speak is to condemn. Such charity hears the tale of slander, but does not repeat it; listens in silence, but forbears comment, then locks the unpleasant secret within the very depths of the heart.

Wife's Privilege.

"Bach said that his wife habitually chastised him and that he could stand it no longer." This is not a quotation from a comic opera or a funny paper, but from a report of court proceedings. The report proceeded: "Mrs. Bach proved, however, to the satisfaction of the court that she was frequently justified in administering corporal punishment to her husband, and she was let off with payment of the costs."—The Outlook.

Business.

Business is the king pin of all professions—the master profession, because business is the one fabric woven out of all entangled activities of a community which go to make up society, and society is life.

scrape in a shimmering opalescence, in which tree and shrub altered their values and became transmitted to silver sentinels, watching over a demesne of violet-velvet shadows filled with sleepy twitterings and stealthy rustlings and the odor of wild honey-suckle.

At the last he stood before the old sun-dial, rearing its column from its pearly clusters of blossoms. "I count no hours but the happy ones," he read the inscription with an indrawn breath. Then, groping at its base, he lifted the ivy that had once rambled there and drew up the tangle again over the stone disk. His Bride's-Garden!

In the library, an hour later, sitting at the big black pigeonhole desk, he wrote to Shirley:

"I am leaving tonight on the mid-night train. Uncle Jefferson will give you this note in the morning. I will not stay at Damory court to bring more pain into your life. I am going very far away. I understand all you are feeling—and so, goodbye, goodbye. God keep you! I love you and I shall love you always, always!"

SUMMER AWNINGS.

They Should Be Attractive as Well as Convenient.

The style and color of awnings should be studied so that a pleasing effect from a distance will be the result of their use. Striped awnings are generally popular, especially those of green and blue, with white and buff with red. These stripes are to be found in several widths. A brown and buff combination is a wise selection for the brown bungalow or shingled house in a rambling style of architecture.

A recent departure which promises to be more than popular, even though it is more expensive, is the plain white canvas on which the stripe or design is painted. This style allows a chance for individuality of taste. When the design on white or cream is used the under side is usually painted over with a restful soft green. Authorities say that these painted canvas shades last longer than the ordinary coarsely woven awnings.

In ordering awnings one is apt to decide on a stripe and not designate the width. If a house is of extensive dimensions and stands at the end of a long avenue, drive or walk and is well surrounded with foliage a wide stripe is most effective, while a smaller house with a limited approach calls for a narrow stripe or even a plain material.

Several new awning devices have been brought out. One for use with the casement window which opens outward has a frame with an extra rib or rod near the top, which holds the canvas high and gives freedom to the window.

Dyeing White Shoes.

One way of prolonging the service of white shoes after they have been cleaned many times is to make them tan colored. They can be made a pretty brown by applying saffron. Mix ten drops of saffron with three teaspoons of olive oil. Clean the shoes well before applying the mixture, as all dark spots will show. Apply with a piece of flannel, and after two coats they will look equal to new.

A Sanitary Grater.

The glass grater is new. It is a roughly pebbled slab of glass screwed to a flat back of wood, making it very convenient to handle, as the wood does not slip in holding it. It washes very easily and is pronounced much more sanitary than the old fashioned tin grater.

EGGS VERSUS FEATHERS.

Quite a controversy is on among poultrymen over the question whether the White Wyandottes of Tom Barron of England, entered in the international egg laying contest at Storrs college, Connecticut, are really Wyandottes or hybrids from a cross with some light bodied Mediterranean breed, such as the Leghorn. Mr. Barron has cabled that this charge that his Wyandottes are cross, or hybrids, is absolutely false. American poultry show standards call for a Wyandotte hen of nearly the shape and carriage of a Partridge Cochins, minus feathers on the legs. The Barron fowls are long bodied, as slender as the Rhode Island It-is or Whites and remarkably active. This controversy is very natural and was bound to arise. American poultry standards have been laying altogether too much stress on form and feathers and not enough on performance. The Barron Wyandottes might not rank high as show birds, but what is important from the utilitarian standpoint is that they deliver the goods and pay for their board bill. It would seem as if the show standards ought to be overhauled so as to give place for fowls that can do something besides look pretty. Until they are changed buyers of the Barron stock or eggs should not look for show birds from this English stock.

If You Are Artistic.

If you have artistic tendencies which are crying for expression there is no better way to express yourself than in your personal appearance and the arrangement and decoration of your home. Make yourself and your home works of art. You will find this much more worth while than wasting a large amount of artistic vitality on second-rate china painting, sketching, modeling and the like.

Reviving Asparagus Ferns.

Should your asparagus plumosa seem to be drooping, give it the salt treatment. Sprinkle a half-inch-wide circle of table salt upon the earth near the spot. In watering, the salt is carried to the roots. One treatment is usually sufficient to bring pronounced improvement in your plant.

"Oh, yaw, meests," replied Minnie, with seeming understanding; "my freck been all gude!"

Mrs. Lane was very popular socially, and it was several days later when she realized that she had received no lettuce from home nor indeed any other mail. She looked in the letter box, but found nothing there.

"Minnie," said Mrs. Lane, going to the kitchen, "have you taken any letters from the postman or out of the post box lately?"

"Oh, yaw, meests," beamed Minnie, rushing to the icebox. "My bring heem for you. My do like you told my the other day, meests."—National Monthly.

PUT DYNAMITE IN U. S. OFFICE

Agricultural Building.

WATCHMAN UNDER ARREST

Confesses Placing the Explosive He
"Found" in Hope of Winning Promotion.

Washington, June 3.—Five sticks of dynamite with burning fuses attached were found in the department of agriculture under the office of Secretary Houston. The fuses were extinguished before damage was done.

An employee of the department discovered the dynamite by accident and extinguished the fuses. The sticks were taken to police headquarters for examination.

The watchman who said he discovered the dynamite was held pending investigation. Officers went in search of another employee, recently discharged, who had been making threats.

Later at police headquarters it was said that Jauch confessed he had put the dynamite under the secretary's office, hoping that by discovering it he would win a promotion. His home is in Springfield Ohio. Jauch, who formerly was a private in the army, is said to have been under treatment for nervous trouble recently at the National Soldiers' Home hospital.

Assistant Secretary B. T. Galloway was in his office adjoining that of the secretary at the time the explosive was found. Secretary Houston is in Missouri attending the commencement of the University of Missouri.

Officers Put to Death After Rebels
Score Two Successes.

Durango, Mex., June 3.—Three decisive engagements with Federal troops between Zacatecas and San Luis Potosi were won by the Constitutionalists May 30 and 31, according to reports received by General Carranza.

Colonel Fernando Reyes, with 600 men of the command of General Carranza Torres, who is investing San Luis Potosi, administered a decisive defeat to a large Federal force at Salinas and later defeated a force sent from San Luis.

Fourteen Federal officers who were captured and thirty-seven privates captured were liberated. Among the officers executed were Colonel Carlos Chavez, two lieutenant colonels, one major, four captains and six lieutenants.

DOUBLE WEDDING HALTED

The Ceremonies Postponed by Illness of Girl.

Palmyra, N. J., June 3.—The illness of Jessie Orcut, of 518 Leconey street, postponed the double wedding of herself and her sister, Irma, planned for today. Death came to Jessie.

When Jessie became ill it was at first decided to change the date so that a double wedding could be held when she recovered, but later arrangements were made for the marriage of Irma and Paul Boehme alone, at the Methodist parsonage. The death of Jessie will again cause a change in the plans of her sister.

Jessie was engaged to Walter Dean. A short time ago she underwent an operation for appendicitis and her convalescence seemed rapid, but a week ago she became seriously ill and did not recover.

Paris, June 3.—The French government decided to treat Colonel Roosevelt in the same way it does former rulers and furnish him with a special permit, authorizing him to pass through police lines at all times on his way through France to Madrid to attend the wedding of his son Kermit to Miss Belle Wyatt Willard.

Many classifications of these special passes are issued to diplomats and others, and are limited in regard to the privilege accorded, except the "white" permit, given only to visiting rulers and former rulers and members of royal families. This is the kind which is to be given to Colonel Roosevelt.

The Thieves Escaped After Looting the House.

Pottsville, Pa., June 3.—Burglars made the biggest haul on record in Schuylkill county when they looted the home of the late W. L. Shearer, in South Center street, of $10,000 worth of jewelry and many other articles.

Shearer was a millionaire when he died a year ago, and his handsome home is filled with costly bric-a-brac and jewels. The burglary was one of extreme audacity, the robbers breaking open a window in the full glare of electric lights to gain an entrance to the house.

Among the valuable jewels stolen were a $250 string of seed pearls, set in medallions, $800 diamond brooch, $200 ring set with three diamonds and rubies, $500 large amethyst pendant, set with diamonds, $300 lavalliere set with diamonds, pearl earrings, gold bangles, gold watches, diamond stickpins and necklaces.

The police have no clue to the robbers and it is believed that they have escaped from the region.

FUGITIVE LEPER AT CAPITAL

Registers at Washington Hotel Before Identity Is Discovered.

Washington, June 3.—John R. Early, who for five years has made many forced journeys about the country in box cars and been held under quarantine in many cities as a leper, turned up in Washington again.

Before his identity was discovered he registered at an uptown hotel, the home of Vice President Marshall and other government officials.

Early's identity was not discovered until after he had telephoned to a newspaper asking for a reporter to interview "Mr. Westwood."

The newspaper man at once recognized the man and informed the authorities, who took Early back to his old place of isolation on the city limits. Early escaped May 18 from the Diamond Head Quarantine Station, near Port Townsend, Wash. He was traced to Victoria, B. C., where the trail was lost.

LOST $12,000 AT POKER

Shenandoah Banker Says He Spent
Amount in Five Years.

Pottsville, Pa., June 3.—Before E. D. Smith, referee in bankruptcy, Joseph Strylyk, of Shenandoah, who recently failed with liabilities of $50,000 and assets of $35,000, testified that from 1909 to 1914 he lost $12,000 playing poker.

All the games in which he participated with so much bad luck were played in Shenandoah, he said. According to the testimony given by Strylyk, stiff poker games are not at all uncommon in Shenandoah. He said upon one occasion he "sat in" at a game on Saturday afternoon and played until Sunday morning, dropping about $1200.

While Strylyk did not say that the games in which he lost his money were fraudulent, he intimated that they were considerably off color.

WHAT ONE MAN DID.

Last year a resident of Scott Bluffs county, Neb., kept an accurate record of what he produced on two and a half acres of ground adjoining a good sized town. The record is by no means phenomenal, but it shows what industry and intelligence will accomplish when rightly directed along the line of intensive agriculture on a small scale. Of the land mentioned nearly three-quarters of an acre was used by the landholder and a lot for the cow to run in. On half an acre devoted to small fruits, plums and cherries $135 worth of fruit was produced, $19 worth being used at home. A half acre of sweet corn netted $43.85, and there was enough left over for seed, chicken feed and for fodder for the cow. One-fifth of an acre of tomatoes yielded him $104.55, while from another quarter of an acre he sold $48 worth of popcorn. The rest of the garden was devoted to miscellaneous garden truck, from which was realized enough to bring the total in come up to $430.70.

SOME NEW PLANTS.

This year the department of agriculture has distributed in all some 20,000 packages of seeds of new forage plants and grains, chiefly feterita and Sudan grass, which are particularly suited to the semiarid conditions found in the west and southwest. Notwithstanding the extreme drought of last year, these two and some other new dry belt crops came to maturity and furnished forage where practically all other crops failed. Feterita is a grain and forage sorghum similar to Kafir and milo, while the Sudan grass is a wild form of sorghum somewhat coarser than millet. Among other new crops, the seeds of which were distributed, were the Amara and Bangalla varieties of field peas, also new strains of wheat, millet and Topy beans, which latter are especially drought resistant and give much promise as an article of human food.

Rickey on Baseball.

Branch Rickey, manager of the Browns, has this to say of his system of conducting his team:

"I have no hard and fast set of rules for my players," said Rickey when asked how he governs his men. "I don't specify the hour at which they must be cuddled up in their beds. I depend upon each man to take care of himself. But I do demand that every player gets up at 7:45, that each gets eight hours of sleep and that he be wide awake when he takes his seat at the breakfast table. I can tell in the morning whether a player has violated baseball's unwritten law against boozing.

"I discourage drinking and cigarette smoking. There isn't a drinker on the club. All the boys are temperate. I have only one cigarette smoker, and he thinks I am ignorant of the fact.

"If a man would rather drink beer and whisky than be a ball player he doesn't belong to a ball club.

"There are almost a dozen players on my team who don't touch a drop of any kind of liquor, and I am going to try to keep them from taking the first drink.

"Drink and baseball don't mix. Cigarettes do a man about as much harm as liquor."

Constructing Pennant Winners.

It has been said that the task of reconstructing a ball club takes five or six years. Mack required just five to get a pennant winner after his 1905 team "blew." McGraw got his championship team together in 1911, just six years after his other victory. Clarke of Pittsburgh spent six years between 1903 and 1909 getting another pennant. It is five years since the Pittsburgh leader had his last championship team. The only survivors among the regulars of the 1909 champions are Hans Wagner and George Gibson. Wilson, Leach, Byrne, Abstein and Miller are gone. Clarke himself was a regular in those days, but he has since retired. Hyatt was pinch hitting, as he is now, but doing very little regular duty. Of the pitchers the only survivor is Adams, who was an unknown until that year, coming to the front with a bound during the world's series. So Clarke has practically a new team.

Live Ball a Failure.

Federal league promoters, who adopted a ball just about twice as lively as the one used in the major leagues in the hope that the public would be pleased with the increased batting that this sphere produces, seem to have been in error. The lively ball has been dropped by the new league and one which is much like that used in organized ball adopted.

Many of the playing fields of the Federal league are small, and the lively ball made home runs hits so numerous that they are no longer considered a feature. Incidentally the games produced big scores, and the public was rapidly gaining the impression that the Federal league was not producing an article of real major league ball; hence the change of balls.

A Fight In Tropical Waters

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

I was at anchor in my yacht one night near the mouth of the great Yaqui river, in Santo Domingo. I had put in there in obedience to storm signals and was waiting for the storm to come and go. But it did not appear. The night I speak of was clear, and there was a full moon. Of course it was hot. It is always hot in that region.

There were rumors of negro insurrections and revolutions in Haiti, which is the western part of the island and not far from where I was lying, and I was not enjoying my stay, for, being at no great distance from either shore, I did not know when a party of lawless negroes would come aboard for murder and loot.

Unfortunately during the day we had heard of a dance that was to take place at the house of one of the small planters living in that region, and the whole crew asked me for leave to go. I preferred that none of them should leave the yacht, but reluctantly consented that half should go in charge of the quartermaster, leaving me the other half. They had not been gone long before I saw a boat coming with a single man in it, who told me that some negroes were looting his house and begged me to send a force to drive them off. I could not refuse such a request, and my men all wished to be permitted to go. I sent four of the five, retaining one man, Erickson, who was not very well and therefore perfectly willing to remain with me.

The second detachment had not been gone long when, pacing the stern deck dissatisfied with myself for letting my crew leave the yacht unprotected, I saw a boat evidently well loaded with human beings leave the north bank of the river and pull directly for me. I smelled danger at once and called to Erickson, who was in his bunk in the fore-cabin, to bring up an armful of weapons and ammunition.

He soon came up the companionway staggering under his load and distributed them in different parts of the yacht. When the approaching boat came near enough to distinguish her crew and I could see that they were all blacks, it flashed across me that the information that had been given my men as to the dance and the story about the attack on my visitor's home were simply ruses to get my men away in order that a party might come out and loot the yacht. I took position with a repeating rifle astern and ordered Erickson to place himself further forward. If I fired I would pick a man in the bow, and he was to fire at a man in the stern.

When the boat came within range I ordered the men to keep off, but they paid no attention to the order, pulling right along. All but the helmsman had their backs to me and every oarsman was busy with his oar; consequently I had the advantage of them, for they could not both row and fight, while I could pour lead into them at lib. The boat was a yawl and there were eight oarsmen in her, each man pulling a single oar.

I gave a second order before firing, and still not being obeyed I took aim at the bow oarsman as near as I could distinguish him from the others and fired. My shot was followed by one from Erickson. We could not see just what damage we had done, but it was evident that we had thrown them into confusion. They stopped rowing and some of them were evidently ministering to wounded men, while others were jabbering at each other in a lingo we did not understand. At least we were not near enough to do so.

Not wishing to hurt any more men than necessary, I ordered them to turn about and pull away. But the steersman, who was evidently their leader, was yelling at them to pull for the yacht, for most of them gave way. I fired again and saw a man fall backward. Erickson duplicated my shot, but apparently did no damage. Seeing that our enemy was bent on rushing us, I dropped my rifle and picked up a couple of hand grenades, calling to Erickson to do the same.

I had scarcely changed my weapon when by a spurt the blacks came up and rounded alongside. Both Erickson and I met where they touched the yacht and each tossed a hand grenade into the boat. A terrible havoc was produced, but I did not stop to see just what damage was done, for I heard oars pulling with a quick stroke on the other side of the yacht. Shouting to Erickson to defend that side, I ran to the other side, carrying an armful of weapons with me.

I saw another boat coming which I did not doubt was an auxiliary force to the one I had been opposing. Without waiting to hail them, I fired a shot at them. I don't think I hit any one, but in another moment I heard a halloo and the sound of oars in another direction. This I knew to be some of my crew returning. The boat on my side changed its course and pulled away as fast as it had come. The boat on the other side in which most of the men had been disabled had already dropped off, seeing Erickson's arms raised with another grenade.

When I got my crew together again I put them in our small boats, with hawsers attached to the yacht, with orders to pull down the river. They did so, and when day broke we hoisted sail and put out to sea. I had had enough of that island, and I have never visited it since.

NEW DIRECTORY OF ADAMS COUNTY

Our representatives wear this badge

The publishers of the old reliable FARM JOURNAL, of Philadelphia, are preparing to publish the Illustrated DIRECTORY OF ADAMS COUNTY, giving the name, post-office, rural route, and telephone connection of every farmer, business man, and householder in the county, all arranged alphabetically, and a classified BUSINESS DIRECTORY, including all business houses in the county, arranged under the proper headings.

With the Directory is given a complete ROAD MAP of the county, with every road NUMBERED to show the exact location of each farm, as given in the Directory.

This Directory will contain many interesting PICTURES of well-known farmers and business men of the county, fine farms, thoroughbred stock, churches and public institutions, schools and pupils, etc.

The names and necessary information are being secured by PERSONAL CANVASSING of all houses and business places, and of the 3752 farms in the county. This Directory and Road Map are so useful and interesting that from our experience in other counties we can guarantee that the Directory will go into at least TWO THOUSAND HOMES OF ADAMS COUNTY, where it will be constantly used by farmers and business men for the next five years.

The Farm Journal Directories are an immense improvement over directories, containing what most publications do not give. Beside all the usual information, they give the names, addresses, telephone connections, and other important information about FARMERS, secured by PERSONAL CANVASSING from each farmer himself. This canvass of country districts is so costly that most directory publishers cannot afford to make it, and ordinary lists of farmers published are in nearly all cases merely copied from official lists.

The classified BUSINESS DIRECTORY includes every business house in the county, whether in city or country. In other directories the names of houses in cities and large towns only are given.

These features, with the Road Map, make the Farm Journal Directory an indispensable hand-book for every live farmer and business man in the county.

If you are not sure that correct information about your farm or business has been given to one of our canvassers, please send it direct to our main office.

Medical Advertising TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Look Young! Bring Back Its Natural Color, Gloss and Thickness.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant, remove every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, gray or dry, scraggly and thin. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use tonic, costing about 50 cents a large bottle at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy" thus avoiding a lot of fuss.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.
